

FCC-I have been a XM radio subscriber for over a year now. To be able to listen to the type of music I like, nationwide without commercials or chatter between two moronic "adults" trying to be funny is something I am willing to pay for. I listen to the radio because I like music, not commercials. The ability to determine my route based on traffic before I get there is invaluable. I cannot have this from local stations. Local stations do not keep you informed constantly of conditions.

To restrict competition because one party decides that competing for the public's attention might cost them is ridiculous and not what America is about. Our whole society is based on competition.

If NAB feels they have an issue, perhaps they should come up with some competitive ideas instead of whining and have the government unfairly step in to protect their fat profits.
